The WHO was founded in the aftermath of World War II to promote international cooperation in the field of health. The WHO's primary purpose is to coordinate and unify the efforts of nations to protect and improve the health of all people. The 'first approach' will be based on group-reading and on class-discussions and exercises (problem-solving, role-playing and VJ-reading, and development of individual following pages) to create a model situation.

In the subsequent writing, the students will write another situation and thereby create and extend it into a story. The student group has already told the expected story, and will therefore not have serious enough ideas. Another possible new situation, such as a child's view of the situation from the eyes of the other. Comparison with the first page in the story line, and the group discussion and evaluation of the story should be done in a self-directed way.

In the following week, we will be working with the first two situations and have a final writing session on the second. However, any student who has not yet completed a story in the previous session may follow a parallel writing task. For example, during the first session of writing the second situation, the story can be the first in a continuous series and then the first page can be a continuation of the first page.

Some preliminary experience with the first approach was obtained, but the system is fairly well suited to a continuous series of pages. The following pages provide the students with a continuous series of pages, and the group will be able to write a story in a series of pages. It is possible to have a series of pages, but the first page is not a story.

There is a number of ways to create a story, and the students will be able to write a story. The first page will be the first page, and the second page will be the second page.
